Mrs. Hugh Bearden was hostess to the Centerville Home Demonstration club with Mrs. Mamie Sanders as co-hostess on Wednesday, Feb. 25.

Mrs. Vernie Gogues, president, called the meeting to order and "America" was sung by the group. The devotionals were given by the hostess after which the group was led in prayer by Mrs. Sid Skinner.

A demonstration on making braided rugs was given by Mrs. Blackwood. Mrs. Guy Linaker displayed a hooked rug which she was making. New and old business was discussed. A committee was appointed by the president to work on a program to be given to raise money for members to go on the out of state tour.

The club showered Mrs. Guy Linaker with many lovely gifts for being the oldest member. Several gifts were also given to Mrs. Linaker. A box of clothing was brought in by Mrs. Blackwood. The March meeting will be held with Mrs. C. J. Smith as hostess.

DOROTHY DIX

Hasty Re-Marriage

Dear Miss Dix: My problem is a desperate one, and I hope you can help me. I have been married less than a year, and have a six-week-old baby. The first 3 or 4 months of our marriage were wonderful. My husband says he loves me, as I do him, and we get along fine except for one thing. He got a divorce just before I married him, and he has three small children. Later he has begun to miss them very much. To satisfy him I took one child with us and had her for a month. His ex-wife wanted to visit her all the time, so after an argument I sent the child back. I would have kept her if the mother had stayed out of the picture.

Now my husband has taken a job in another city to be nearer the children. He sends me money but that isn't enough; I miss him terribly. I thought our own baby would make up for the others, but he still seems to love them above everything. Do you think if I adopted one of the other children, it would help matters?

MRS. S. R.
Answer: The keynote of your difficulty lies in the words "he got a divorce before I married him." Your husband apparently rushed into his second marriage, and now his heart is still with his first family. Knowing the circumstances surrounding your husband's divorce would aid in reaching a workable solution. Lacking this information, my immediate advice would be to consult a marriage or spiritual advisor to whom all facts could be presented.

Remarried in Haste
If the second marriage had not followed the first so closely, your husband and his first wife might have been reconciled. Perhaps he's not fully conscious of this possibility himself, but there is no doubt that he is still very much aware of his original family, and is torn between both his households. His place now certainly is with you. He should stop teetering between two families, settle down with one and concentrate his responsibilities where they primarily belong right now. The other three children should be permitted to visit him.

showed definite signs of genius. When Joseph was 14, his mother entered him in the Orthodox seminary at Tiflis, the ancient capital of Georgia, 45 miles to the Southwest of Gori. The seminary was run by stern monks, whose discipline was severe. Before long, Joseph began to rebel, as did many other students. If the seminary forbade association with the Georgian nationalists who hated Moscow, then Joseph would be a nationalist. He devoted himself to a series of fiery poems of Georgian patriotism, signing them by the pet name his mother gave him: "Seselo," meaning "Little Joseph."

Mostly because the seminary forbade it, this brilliant grandson of a self deliberately smuggled in revolutionary literature, including the work of Karl Marx. Time and again the monks inflicted severe punishment when he was caught, but this only spurred him to even more rebellion. Later he was to recall bitterly what he termed the "Jesuitical discipline" of the monks.

Joseph joined a secret Socialist organization, a social democratic group with Georgian nationalist overtones. Older students taught him the theory and planning of revolution. Soon Joseph himself became a leader in this activity. The monks would take no more. On May 29, 1899 at the age of 20, Djugashvili was expelled from the seminary. He was on his way to becoming the implacable foe of all organized religion.

By now he considered himself a Marxist and a cold, un sentimental realist. With the Marxists, he believed firmly that capitalism must develop Russia from a backward to an advanced country before there could be any dictatorship of the proletariat. He bitterly opposed the terrorist "Narodniks" (Agrarian Socialists) who preached assassination and violence.

After the seminary, Djugashvili began his revolutionary work in earnest. He became a member of the Central Committee of the outlawed Social Democratic party in Tiflis, and automatically became hunted by Czarist police.

The hostesses served refreshments to 14 members, guests, Miss Pearl Sanders, Mrs. Eugene Gogues and Mrs. Charles Mullins. Mrs. Blackwood, the March meeting will be held with Mrs. C. J. Smith as hostess.

according to court order or divorce agreement. Forget the adoption question. Separating the children would not be a good idea. Your husband should return to his hometown, and curtail his attentions to his ex-wife.

Dear Miss Dix: Quite some time ago I wrote asking your opinion of my situation. I have never seen my letter in the paper. I'm in my 20's, and am very fond of a married man. I have been seeing him regularly, and though I've tried to change my feelings toward him, I find my affection increasing. The situation is becoming serious and I'd like your advice.

M. J.
Answer: Had you given me your address, a personal reply would have been sent you. As for seeing your letter in the paper, the same question has been dealt with so often, and so emphatically, in this column, that no reader can be in doubt of my stand. You're kidding yourself when you say you have tried to break your attachment. No love, particularly a clandestine affair, is broken by continuing to see the man. You are deliberately feeding your love. You aren't looking for advice; you're seeking justification, and you'll never get it from this column.

Dear Miss Dix: After several years of widowhood, and at the age of 50, I married a man 70. The trouble is he doesn't want to go anywhere and I like to go places and have a good time. I get so blue staying home.

MRS. RHODA T.
Answer: You can scarcely expect a man of 70 to enjoy gallivanting. He's earned the right to rest by the family hearth. In fact, he probably married you to get home comforts. Better learn to make the best of it.

what would happen proves to be wrong, State Department broadcasts over the Voice of America to the Communist countries had emphasized a long period of uncertainty over who would really be Stalin's successor.

Malenkov's appointment as chairman of the Council of Ministers apparently answered that question weeks or months ahead of Washington's guesses. There had been considerable belief that Malenkov, as the ranking man in the Communist party machine, would have party control while Molotov, as ranking man in the government, would for a time head the Council of Ministers.

for investigations into the Korean supply situation.

Secretary of Defense Wilson sought to quiet the furor late yesterday with assurances to senators that there is enough ammunition in the Far East Command to counter any enemy attack in Korea.

Wilson wrote Sen. Byrd (D-Va.) that there will be no delay in clearing up the ammunition situation and "we will present the facts with utmost dispatch." Byrd demanded an explanation of any shortages and punishment of anyone responsible.

Wilson also wrote Chairman Saltonstall (R-Mass.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee that he will come before the committee Tuesday to testify along with Van Fleet, Secretary of the Army, Stevens and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army chief of staff.

The Senate group had called on these top Pentagon chiefs to clear up "confusing and conflicting" reports given previously by military men in their testimony about ammunition supplies.
